

Ebola Update: 27 October 2014

- The United States military is developing mobile isolation units that can transport up to 12 patients on planes. The prototypes will be tested next month and deployed January 2015 in West Africa.
- The Governors of New York, New Jersey and Illinois in the United States imposed mandatory 21-day quarantines for all medical workers who had contact with Ebola patients. While the quarantines are still in effect, health workers are no longer required to be in isolation at a hospital and can remain in their homes unless symptomatic. Asymptomatic individuals are not contagious.
